PLUNKETT RETIRES

truck had an auxiliary tank with 100 gallons of gasoline back of the cab. "The engine struck this tank just a little to the left side of the engine and gas splashed all over, and caught fire immediately. That also set the grease and oil and even set the paint on fire. We had a burning engine until a fire truck from Blackstone arrived and put out the blaze. The engineer and fireman received burns. A new engine came in from Crewe, and the run ended at Norfolk two to three hours late. But Mr. Plunkett said the accident was not the railroad's fault.

A devout churchman, Mr. Plunkett sums up his career by saying that he has been blessed, and quotes the Psalmist that "the lines have fallen to me in pleasant places."

But he does not mean that his career is over. Far from it! He owns a nice farm and has a herd of cattle on it. Now he looks forward to this farm and his livestock, and growing grain. At only 67, he is "too young to retire." His home and farm are not too far away from the main line of the railroad, and when Dave hears the trains rolling through he will pause and recall the happy career of 2,300,000 miles "riding the rails."
